THE BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

THE Omaha Republican gives the following history of this production, which the London Spectator pronounced to be the finest poem ever written in America:

"The early part of the war, one dark Saturday night, in the dead of the winter, there died in the Commercial Hospital, in Cincinnati, a young woman, over whose head only two and twenty Summers had passed. She had once been possessed with an enviable share of beauty, and had been, as she herself says, 'flattered and sought for the charms of her face;' but alas! upon the fair brow was written that terrible word—prostitute! Once the pride of respectable parentage, her first wrong step was the small beginning of the 'same old story over again,' which has been only the life history of thousands. Highly educated, and with accomplished manners, she might have shone in the best society.—But the evil hour that proved her ruin was the door from which went out the innocence of childhood, and having spent a young life in disgrace and shame, the poor friendless outcast. Among her personal effects, was was found in manuscript, 'The Beautiful Snow,' which was immediately carried to Enos B. Reed, a gentleman of culture and literary taste, who was at that time editor of the National Union. In the columns of that paper, on the morning of the day following the girl's death, the poem appeared in print for the first time.

When the paper containing the poem came out on Sunday morning, the body of the victim had not received burial. The attention of Thomas Buchanan Read, one of the first American poets, was so taken with their stirring pathos, that he immediately followed the corpse to its final resting place.

Such are the plain facts concerning her whose 'Beautiful Snow' shall long be remembered as one of the beautiful gems of American literature."

THE BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow!
Filling the sky and the earth below,
Over the house-tops, over the street,
Over the heads of the people you meet,
Dancing,
Flirting,
Skipping along;
Beautiful snow! it can do nothing wrong,
Flying to kiss a fair lady's cheek,
Clinging to lips in a frolicsome freak;
Beautiful snow from the heavens above,
Pure as an angel, gentle as love!

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow!
How the flakes gather and laugh as they go
Whirling about in their maddening fun,
It plays in its glee with every one—
Chasing,
Laughing,
Hurrying by,
It lights on the face and sparkles the eye,
And the playing dogs with a bark and a bound
Snap at the crystals that eddy aroun!
The town is alive, and its heart in a glow
To welcome the coming of beautiful snow.

How wildly the crowd swaying along,
Hailing each other with humor and song!
How the gay sledges, like meteors pass by,
Bright for a moment, then lost to the eye!
Ringing,
Swinging,
Dashing they go,
Over the crust of the beautiful snow—
Snow so pure when it falls from the sky,
As to make one regret to see it lie
To be tramped and tracked by the thousands of feet,
Till it blends with the filth in the horrible street.

Once I was pure as the snow, but I fell—
Fell like the snow-flakes, from heaven to hell;
Fell to be tramped as filth in the street;
Fell to be scoffed, to be spit on and be beat;
Pleading,
Cursing,
Dreading to die;
Selling my soul to whoever would buy;
Dealing in shame for a morsel of bread;
Hating the living and fearing the dead.
Merciful God! Have I fallen so low?
And yet I was once like the beautiful snow.

Once I was fair as the beautiful snow,
With an eye like a crystal, a heart like its glow;
Once I was loved for my innocent grace,
Flattered and sought for the charms of my face.
Father,
Mother,
Sister, all,
God and myself have I lost by my fall!
The veriest wretch that goes shivering by
Will make a wide sweep lest I wander too nigh;
For all that is on or above me, I know
There's nothing so pure as the beautiful snow.

How strange it should be that this beautiful snow
Should fall on a sinner with nowhere to go!
How strange it should be when night comes again,
If the snow and the ice struck my desperate brain!
Fainting,
Freezing,
Dying alone,
Too wicked for prayer, too weak for a moan,
To be heard in the streets of the crazy town,
Gone mad in the joy of the snow coming down,
To be and to die in my terrible woe,
With a bed and a shroud of the beautiful snow.

Helpless and foul as the trampled snow,
Sinner, despair not! Christ stooped low
To rescue the soul that is lost in its sin,
And raise it to life and enjoyment again.
Groaning,
Bleeding,
Dying for thee,
The crucified hung on the accursed tree,
His accents of mercy fell soft on thine ear.
Is there mercy for me? Will He heed my prayer?
O God! In the stream that for sinners did flow
Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

☞ "I think I have seen you before, sir," said one gentleman to another. "Are you not Owen Smith?" "Oh, yes," said the other, "I'm owin' Smith and owin' Brown and owin' Jones and owin' everybody."

☞ It is true to many men that their memory is nothing but a row of books to hang up grudges on.

THE RICH UNCLE:
—OR—
JOSHUA BARRETT'S WILL.

Some two or three miles from the town of Aylesbury, England, there once lived three cousins of the family name of Barrett. They were all married and settled on farms within a few miles of each other, and each of them had grown up children around them. They were not rich but in fair circumstances—each had expectations. An eccentric uncle had gone to India when quite a young man, and rumor told them that he had become very wealthy and probably would die an old bachelor. Who, then, but themselves would be heirs to his property, they being at the time his nearest relatives?

One day the three families were thrown into a great commotion by each of them receiving a letter which contained, beside the date and signature, only the following words:

"I am rich. Fools here call me a nabob. I wouldn't give a title to a cat. No matter; I shall not live always and when I die my property must go to somebody. I am coming to find an heir. I shall come and see you and hope you will please me. I hope you are not troubled with beggars. I do not like to see them about."

One dark rainy night, about three weeks after the reception of these letters by the cousins, the family of Moses Barrett was thrown into a state of excitement by the appearance at the door of two men in livery who announced themselves as the avant couriers of Joshua Barrett, of India, who would claim their hospitality for the night.

Saying which, the messengers put spurs to their horses and dashed away without giving the astonished listeners time to ask a single question.

Now, Moses Barrett was a hunks, his wife a shrew and the three children chips of the two blocks, but all undertook to change their natures for a time, or rather to be ready to change them on the appearance of the rich uncle—for what was the use of acting with the curtain down.

"Now Moses, you stingy old brute," said his wife, "if you know on which side your bread is buttered, it's to be hoped you will have some chickens killed for his excellency's supper, which is more'n you did for Christmas, and some of that wine you fetched up which you have had in the cellar since the year one, and a fire made in the best room that hasn't been there these ten years and all our nice clothes put on—that is not much, for you'll never allow us anything decent to wear."

"And it is to be hoped, old woman," retorted the angry husband, "that you will soften down that screeching voice of yours, and twist your wrinkles into smiles, and that will be something I've not seen since the first week of our marriage."

Great activity was displayed by all in getting ready to give the rich uncle the best reception possible, and all rejoiced, as much as a hopeful family could rejoice that they would be the first to receive a visit from him, hoping, of course, that they might forestall the other relations in his good graces.

It would have been a strange way for a person to have made a visit, but they knew the uncle was very eccentric, and his being so very wealthy made it all right in their eyes. He might have come and stood on his head provided he paid for his antics.

In the midst of their hurried preparations there appeared at the door an old, feeble looking, white-haired man thinly clad, and his soiled garments clinging to his shriveled form.

"Will you be so kind, good people," he said, "as to give me something to eat, and a place to sleep to-night?"

"We have nothing to eat, and if we had, we don't harbor beggars," replied the master of the house in a coarse brutal tone.

"But I am old and feeble, and very hungry and tired" said the aged applicant in a pleading tone, "and if you drive me away I may perish."

"Well that's what you ought to have done long ago," put in the cross old dame. When people get too lazy to work and start out begging, it's my opinion they're better dead nor alive. Besides we expect company soon—a rich gentleman from India—and aint got no room for the like of you."

"Well then," said the old man, with a sorrowful look, "Since you cannot keep me over night will you please to give me something to eat, and I'll go further."

The dame brought up a piece of brown bread, and, with an angry look was about to hand it to the mendicant, more for the purpose as it seemed, of getting rid of him than for any feeling or compassion; but her miserly husband interrupted, and said sharply—

"I told you we had nothing for you, so travel on."

"I'll set the dog on you if you don't, you old beggar!" cried a lad of ten. "My rich uncle is coming here to-night and he can't bear beggars, so you had better be going while your bones are whole."

"May heaven be more merciful than you," sighed the old man as he turned and disappeared in the darkness."

Some half an hour after he knocked at the door of Stephen Barrett, another of the nephews and asked for food and lodging.

"It isn't convenient for me to keep you to-night," said the master of the house in a mild dignified tone. "Besides we don't like to encourage beggars. If you are poor and not able to work, the parish where you belong is bound to support you. No one need starve in this country which the Lord, praise His name, has so bountifully blest. I trust I am not wanting for charity—as an humble follower of the Lord Jesus Christ,—I hope I am not, but what with taxes to support the government and the poor, donations to the benevolent societies and the heathen missions, it is as much as I can do to live and give my family a respectable maintenance." Now, my friend, if you are poor and unable to work, (though I do not see why you may not as well work as travel,) you had better throw yourself on the parish where you belong."

"But I am tired, wet, and hungry," said the man, "and all the parishes in the world can't do me any good to-night."

"But you should have thought of that before you left home," now chimed in the good housewife with a sanctified air. "It is sinful to tempt Providence as it is called, and whoever sins must expect judgment. I never leave home without providing for the journey, and of course I don't expect any one to feed and shelter me for nothing. It is a sin too, to be idle when one is able to work, and it is against my principles, as a true Christian, to encourage any one in sinning."

"Then I suppose I am to understand that you refuse me both food and lodging?" said the old man."

"As to food," said the pious dame, glancing at her husband, "if you are very hungry, I suppose we can do something that way, but lodging is out of the question, for mounted couriers have been here to say that a very rich uncle of ours, from India, will be here very soon, and he wrote some time ago that he did not like to have beggars about where he was, and we should not like to offend him. True, we hardly expect him to-night, but then he might come, you know, and we wouldn't like to run any risk."

"Well, then," said the old man with a sigh, "I will take the food, if you please, and go on even if I perish."

"Put your trust in the Lord, my friend; put your trust in the Lord!" said Stephen Barrett, solemnly.

"Yes," echoed his wife, "put your trust in the Lord! that's what we do when in trouble. Sarah, go down in the cellar and bring up a couple of those cold potatoes for this old man—they are very good eating when one is hungry—I like them myself. Yes, put your trust in the Lord and do not leave home again without means. By the bye, when I think of it," added the good woman, laying down a cap frill, on which she had been busily at work while talking, and looking up with a bright twinkle in her eye, "I do believe you can get a good night's lodging at Harry Barrett's, who lives only a half mile from here on the road south. He's a great hand for taking in strangers."

She looked at her husband, and both smiled knowingly, for they were thinking that if the rich uncle were to find the beggar there, it might increase Stephen Barrett's chances of becoming the favorite heir.

Sarah Jane now returned and handed the old man two little cold potatoes. He took them, turned them slowly over, examined them on all sides and murmured—

"They have eyes—but can they see? I think not, for if they could, they'd blush red, instead of keeping such a dark color." Then glancing slowly around the neat, tidy, cheerful room, taking in three prim girls, and their pious parents, he quickly tossed the potatoes into the lap of the astonished mistress, saying as he did so, "I beg your pardon, madam, but I did not intend to rob you."

"O, you sinful, wicked old creature," exclaimed the good dame in holy horror, as the disgusted old man turned and went out and shut the door with a slam.

In less than half an hour the unfortunate wayfarer was trying his chances at the house of Harry Barrett.

"Come in," said a strong, hearty and cheerful voice in answer to his knock.

He entered a large, plainly furnished apartment, and beheld a groupe of six persons—father, mother, two sons, and two daughters—seated around the pleasant fire, with a bright light on the table near them, and all looking contented and happy.

On seeing his visitor was an old man and a stranger, the master of the house arose, and invited him to come forward and take a seat, and all the others drew back respectfully, to enlarge the circle, and give him the best place at the fire.

"I have called," said the old man stopping and removing his hat from his white head, "to ask if you would give me some food and lodging for the night."

"Of course we will, my friend, and glad of the chance to help a fellow in need;" said Henry Barrett, in a frank, cordial tone. "Sit down, and make yourself at home. Here, give me your hat. Come, girls, hurry up something warm for the old gentleman who is chilled through as I can readily see.—You ought not to have been out so late in this storm, father."

"No, I know," returned the old gentleman, holding his trembling hands to the fire, "but the persons to whom I applied wouldn't keep me."

"What! refuse loding to an old man like you, on such a night as this!" exclaimed the indignant host. "Who were the most inhospitable wretches?"

The man described the house and people where he had called.

"I see," said the host, with a grim smile. "I understand! the first family kicked you out?"

"Almost."

"The second prayed you out?"

"Almost."

"They are both relatives of mine, but I am ashamed to own them."

"They said, by way of excuse," pursued the old man, "that they were expecting a rich uncle from India who would not like to see a beggar about."

"Aye, my friend, and we are expecting the same rich uncle, too—an eccentric old bachelor, who says he wants to make one of us an heir to his vast possessions. Two gaily mounted messengers arrived here this evening to say that he would be here to-night or to-morrow, probably the latter.—But whenever he does come, he will find us as we are, and if he don't like our looks, or the company we keep, he can take himself off again."

"Nay, my friend," said the aged stranger, rising in some trepidation, "do not for the world let my presence jeopardize your interests with your rich kinsman! I will merely get something to eat, and travel on till I find another lodging."

"No you wont," said Harry Barrett, bluntly. "You wont leave this house to-night for all the uncles the Indies can turn out. Sit down again, sir, sit down and make yourself at home. I know the duty of a man who has faith in God, and I'm going to do it. What is his money to me? I can't eat it or drink it, nor wear it, nor carry it into the other world; and I'm sure it wont bring me any happiness that I don't now enjoy, and I also know that it would not compensate me for one mean action. No! let Joshua Barrett settle his money as he choses—I'll arrange my conscience to suit myself."

"God bless you!" murmured the old man, in a trembling voice, and, bowing his head upon his hands, he wept in silence.

He remained at that hospitable house during the night, and was entertained like an honored guest.

The next day being fair, he took his leave. As he was about leaving the house, Harry Barrett, putting a crown in his hand, said—

"Take it, my friend, and not a word. I don't know who you are, and I have not felt it my duty to inquire; but this I know, from your appearance, manner and language, that you're not a common beggar, and that you have seen better days, which I sincerely hope you may see again. It's as much as my circumstances will justify, and may, perhaps, serve to keep you from starving some night, or sleeping by the wayside."

"God will repay you," said the old man solemnly, and he walked slowly away, wiping the tears from his eyes.

"He has already," mused Harry Barrett, placing his hand upon his heart. "I have it here, principal and interest."

Long and in vain did the selfish families of Moses and Stephen Barrett look for the appearance of their rich uncle from India in a carriage and four, and great was their disappointment thereat.

Then came the intelligence that he was sick in London. Next came the news that he was dead, and had left a will.

What an intense desire to know the contents of the will! What a wild, furious excitement when the contents became known!

To Moses Barrett he devised one pound to buy a coffin for the dog his precious boy threatened to set on a beggar.

To Stephen Barrett he bequeathed one pound three pence—the pound to be devoted to the parish poor—the three pence to buy cold potatoes for beggars, with the hope that he and his pious family would put their trust in the Lord.

To Harry Barrett and his heirs forever, he had willed all the remainder of his vast wealth, some half a million pounds sterling, with a hope that they would sometimes recall with pleasure the visit of the old white-haired man they once so kindly entertained.

The old beggar of that dark, stormy night was no other than Joshua Barrett himself!

☞ With a wife, her husband's fault should be sacred. A woman forgets what is due to herself when she condescends to that refuge of weakness—a female confidante. A wife's heart should be the tomb of her husband's failings, and his character far more valuable, in her estimation, than his life. The same advice should be treasured by the husband with regard to the failings of his wife. None should know each other better, and each should strive to bury that which they see is faulty in the other.

☞ An honest rustic went into the shop of a Quaker to buy a hat, for which fifteen shillings was demanded. He offered twelve shillings. "As I live," said the Quaker, "I cannot afford to give it thee at that price." "As you live!" exclaimed the countryman, "then live more moderately, and be hanged to you." "Friend," said the Quaker, "thou shalt have the hat for nothing. I have sold hats for twenty years, and my trick was never found out till now."

☞ Two Irishmen were in prison, the one for stealing a cow, the other for stealing a watch.

"Hollo, Mike, what o'clock is it?" said the cow thief to the other.

"And sure, Pat, I haven't any time-piece handy, but I think it is most milking-time."

☞ "Bridget, what have you done with the cream? Those children can not eat skim-milk for breakfast."

"Sure, ma'am, and it isn't myself that would be afther givin' the scum to yez. I tuk that off and gave it to the cats."

☞ Someone savagely says, "Times was when you saw a plump woman, you knew what you was looking at—but them times is gone by."

Editorial Brevities.

—The Mormon incubus is to receive attention from Congress. The sooner the better.

—The temperance party in New Hampshire has issued a call for a State Convention.

—Revenue matters on the Pacific coast are said to be in a deplorable state of demoralization.

—Ex-Secretary Stanton, it is rumored, is to be tendered a place upon the U. S. Supreme Bench made vacant by Judge Grier.

—The Senate Postal Committee favor the apportionment of postage stamps among members of Congress as a substitute for the franking privilege.

—Governor Geary has recalled the death warrant which fixed the 22d instant as the day for the execution of Dr. Paul Schœppe at Carlisle. The Governor did right.

—A detachment of the Fifth Cavalry has been very successful in destroying a number of illicit distilleries near Jonesville and Cumberland Gap, in Virginia, although they met with resistance.

—The amount of new fractional currency in the vaults of the United States Treasury at this date is $1,812,000; amount outstanding, $13,943,913, amount of United States notes, series 1869, of all denominations outstanding at this date, $7,960,000.

—Illinois is still the State for divorce cases. No man or woman applies for a divorce who is not forthwith published, and everything relative to the marriage relation existing between the couple becomes a matter of public comment.

—There was another excitement on the 17th, at the gold room in Wall street, New York. The room was crowded with an excited and surging crowd, and the figures on the gold indicator's dial moved rapidly up and down. At one time the price touched 120¼, the lowest point reached since September 26, 1862, when gold sold at 120¼. The "bulls" lost heavily, when Secretary Boutwell accepted the bids, and they were disgusted

☞ Great speculation is indulged in with regard to our coming Representatives in the Legislature. Will they be pure; will they be honest; will they be brave? are the questions asked. Why is it that there ever was occasion for such questions? It seems no legislator is elected by the people without his character is afterwards open to general remark, and rumor is busy with her slanders, libels and insidious suspicions. How truly can it be said, there is no honor in being elected to the Legislature when your every action is watched by your constituents to see whether you are an honest man. Our Legislature, it appears, has become the crucible to try men's souls, and how many, alas, come out of it corrupted and unrefined. We would that it were otherwise; and it will be otherwise, when less bribery is allowed to sneak its way into the halls, and when constituents cease to suspect before the guilt is committed. The people, it is expected, will vote for honest men; but how often is it the case that the "honest" member is accused of corruption before he opens his mouth, or even casts a vote—and yet he may be honest. While such a state of things exists honest men will refuse to go to the Legislature to have their motives impugned, and political tricksters will have the sway.

☞ The United States Treasury now holds $75,478,800 in Government securities, for which $89,282,272 13 were paid. The accrued interest on these bonds will amount at the end of the year to $1,528,728. The Tresurer's books show the amount of coupons paid during the month of November to be $12,364,265 50.

CONGRESS.—A number of bills were introduced in both Houses last week. The Senate has had in consideration a bill to perfect the reconstruction of the State of Georgia, and much talk ensued thereon. Both Houses have agreed to adjourn from the 22d inst. to the 5th of January.

A red-cedar hitching-post, set in Plymouth, Conn., in 1770, is still serviceable, and apparently will be good for twenty years more.

An escaped captive states that twenty white children are held as prisoners among the Cheyenne Indians.

Minnesota farmers are feeding wheat to their hogs, and California farmers Bartlett pears to their cows.

"Drowned while skating," is already beginning to be a stereotyped phrase in the Northern and Eastern journals.

NEW POSTAGE STAMPS.—The National Bank Note Company are engraving from photographs, for the Post Office Department, a complete set of designs for a new series of postage stamps. The photographs are taken by Brady, from the original statues and busts of distinguished Americans, Franklin, Jackson, Washington, Jefferson, Clay, Webster, Gen. Scott, Commodore Perry and others. On the one cent stamp is the head of Franklin, on the two cent stamp the head of Jackson, on the three cent stamp the head of Washington, on the six cent stamp the head of Lincoln, on the twelve cent stamp the head of Clay, and so on up to the dollar stamp. The stamps are engraved and have been approved by the P. O. Department and by the President and Cabinet. They are larger than the present stamps, are more appropriate and elegant in all respects than any that have been heretofore used. They will be issued in January, and take the place of the present stamps.

☞ The Brookville Jeffersonian, which has been edited for about six months by our genial friend, G. Nelson Smith, Esq., is again under the editorial charge of J. P. George, Esq. The retiring editor concludes a valedictory address to his readers in the following complimentary style:

Of late years I have been studying how to make a fortune in an honest way, but could never hit upon a method of doing so until now. Now I know how. I recollect that some years ago the scientific men of France were speculating and experimenting on an instance of a young man being brought to life after being frozen up for several years on the Alps. The blood of a living man was infused into the frozen youth, and he moved and spoke. The experiment was afterwards tried upon a bare frozen for that purpose, and with perfect success.

Here then is my only remaining chance to make a fortune. If I can get away from Brookville in peace and safety, and have one dollar left, I will put it out at interest, have myself packed in ice, and remain frozen with suspended life until the interest amounts to a fortune. I will then return to administer to the poor descendants of the present rich men of Brookville.

Our National Cemeteries.

Adjt. Gen. Lorenzo Thomas has finished the report of his inspection of all the cemeteries that contain the remains of Union soldiers who fell during the Rebellion. The report covers 400 pages, and contains much interesting and valuable information. By an act of Congress, passed in 1868, Gen. Thomas was ordered to this duty, and concluded his labors but a few weeks since. During that time he has visited every State and Territory in the country where there was a public or private cemetery in which a Union soldier was buried. He has full lists of the number buried in each and every place, known and unknown, white or black, officers, soldiers, or citizen employees of the government. He gives in detail the names, companies, regiments, divisions, corps, and general command, in which the deceased was enrolled at the time of his death, and where that information could not be procured, as much data as he could obtain in reference thereto.

The total number of white officers and soldiers, known and unknown, buried, is nearly 50,000; the number of colored soldiers nearly 50,000, two-thirds of whom are not known by names.

Gen. Thomas states that the expense attending the burial or re-interment of these bodies, and the laying out and improving the National Cemeteries, has reached $4,000,000, and he estimates that it will cost $2,000,000 more to complete the work and keep the National Cemeteries (35 in number) in good order. At all these National Cemeteries there is a keeper and assistant, and the expense attending the care of each cemetery will range from $1,500 to $2,000 per annum for salaries alone, while the other expenses will reach $50,000 per annum. He makes statements to Congress and gives data why various appropriations should be made at once. If the cemetery at Mound City, Illinois, is not repaired and the levee strengthened there is danger of a general washing out of the bodies buried there. The iron or stone inclosures for the National Cemeteries, as ordered by Congress cannot be erected on account of the failure of an appropriation for the same. The report will be delivered to Congress at an early day.

IN DEATH UNDIVIDED.—The Richmond Whig says Mr. and Mrs. James Hayes were two of the oldest, most estimable and best known people in Mecklenburg, Va. Thousands who traveled Cox's road partook of their genuine "old Virginia" hospitality.—Before the war they were prosperous. Thursday, the 28th ult, they were sold out under the bankrupt act. The old gentleman made an unavailing attempt to retain the dear old homestead. None could tell from the cheerful look they both wore how keenly the pang of giving it up was felt. But in less than a week, namely Wednesday, November 3d, these two people, born the same year, and that eighty-six years ago, were gathered, on the same day, to an eternal mansion above.

☞ The latest intelligence received from Dr. David Livingstone, the eminent African explorer, states that he has discovered a tribe of negroes living altogether in underground dwellings. Some of these subterranean excavations are said to be thirty miles long, and have little brooks of pure water running through them, on the banks of which the natives live. The people are very dark and well formed. Their expressed history or legends are painted upon wings of birds in hyeroglyphics.

At a meeting of the soldiers of the war of 1812 held in Newport, R. I., recently, 22 veterans were present whose united ages amounted to 1675 years, an average of about 77 years each.

A SPLENDID PRIZE FOR THE LADIES.—The finest, most pleasing, and costly engraving ever published in America, to be presented as a premium to each subscriber to "Demorest's Monthly," a Magazine of practical utility in the household, a mirror of the fashions, and a literary conservator of surpassing interest and artistic excellence, acknowledged to be the Model Parlor Magazine of America.

The engraving, 28x36 inches, is from the original painting, entitled, "The Pic-Nic on the 4th of July."

The painting took a whole year, and is considered the finest of the entire list of numerous popular productions by Lillie M. Spencer. The engraving was the labor of four years, by three eminent artists—John Rogers, John Halpin, and Samuel Hollyer; the last named having been induced to come from Europe to America expressly to finish it. The engravers have ably seconded the successful labors of the painter. None but artists can fully appreciate the skill and labor lavished on this engraving. The general effect is very fine and impressive, and the delicate finish to the heads will bear the most minute inspection. The union of line and stipple is executed with unusual ability, and their skillful combination has greatly attributed to the success of the engravers in this unsurpassed proof of their artistical genius.

The work on the engraving alone cost over seven thousand dollars, besides the cost of the copyright, and is acknowledged by competent judges the most elaborately finished large work of art ever engraved in America.

Fine copies of this magnificent Picture, on heavy plate paper, worth $10 each, are to be given as a Premium to each Subscriber to "Demorest's Monthly Magazine." Yearly Subscriptions only Three Dollars, and Ten Cents, (which is to be sent with the subscription,) for the postage on the engraving, (which will be mailed securely done up on a roller.)

This is certainly the largest, most liberal and splendid premium ever offered to single subscribers by any publisher, and affords an easy and economical way for any one to secure an elegant work of art, a Parlor Picture that is only next to a piano in the way of ornamentation, and perpetual reminder of a day which ought to be cherished and held in remembrance by every true American.

The reception of this magnificent picture will take every one by surprise, and we do not venture anything in saying that $10 will not procure another that combines so much of interest and beauty.

Specimens of the Magaziue, with circulars giving full particulars, will be sent to any given address, post free, on receipt of 15 cts. Address, "Demorest's Monthly," 838 Broadway, N. Y.

"THE PHYSICAL LIFE OF WOMAN; advice to the Maiden, Wife and Mother," is the title of a Book by Dr. G. H. Napheys, of Philadelphia, just published by George Maclean, 719 Sansom St., Philadelphia. It treats on the hygiene of female and married life, as may be seen from the following extracts from the table of contents:

"The distinction of the sexes." Persons of both sexes and of no sex. The age of nubility. Love. Love is eternal. Of divorce.—Of courtship. How to choose a husband.—Shall cousins marry? The wedding night. The dignity and propriety of the sexual instinct. Advice to wives who desire to have children. The limitation of offspring. The signs of fruitful conjunctions. How to have beautiful children. Transmission of talent—of disease. How to have boys and girls at will. Birth-marks, and how to prevent them. Signs of pregnancy. Confinement. Nursing. The change of life."

These, and many kindred subjects of equal delicacy and importance, are handled with such scientific precision, and yet in such an elevated moral tone, that the book has received the highest praise from such distinguished authorities as Surgeon General Hammond, of New York, the Rev. Horace Bushnell, of New England, the Rev. George A. Crooke, D. D., Philadelphia, and many others. The author is a regular physician, holding a responsible position in the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, and his style is throughout chaste and agreeable.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher says of it: "Every mother should have this book, nor should she suffer a child to be married without the knowledge which it contains."

The work is published by subscription only, but any one can have a neatly-bound copy mailed, post-paid, by forwarding the price, $1.50, to the publisher, to whom all who wish to be agents, should write.

A TYPHOON.—An officer of Captain Rowan's flag ship thus describes a typhoon: "Every few minutes a drizzling rain squall would strike, and then pass rapidly away. When everything was quiet I could hear a low, murmuring sound like the faint echo of distant thunder, and I noticed at the same time the barometer falling steadily. At eight o'clock the next morning it was blowing half a gale from the southeast, and the sky was thick. By noon it was blowing a fresh gale and in a few moments after we were struck by a squall, the like of which I had never seen before.—From 12.30 to 2 p. m. the wind increased until a man could not stand on deck without a life line. It was a grand sight. At times the sea would rise twenty or thirty feet, when the wind would cut it clean off at the base and take the whole body of water off to the leeward. Our ship rode it out safely, but some of our neighbors came to grief. This typhoon was one of unusual severity, and extended over a space of five hundred miles. Considerable damage was done to the shipping at sea, and one American ship, the Naples, was driven ashore and dismasted in the harbor of Yokohama."

A JAPANESE CRUCIFIXION.—A Japanese crucifixion at Yokohama, is thus described:

"When the prisoner who was to be crucified had been placed on his back on a stout wooden cross prepared for the occasion, he was securely lashed thereto, but not nailed. Then the sentence was read, and two stout men with long spears came forward. The one on the right side of the doomed man stuck the point of his spear in very deliberately, about two inches, and just under the ribs felt about awhile with it to ascertain that it was all clear of bones, and then, with a powerful thrust upwards, the head of the spear was sent through until it appeared on the top of the right shoulder. The man on the left side then did likewise. The victim, who was a mere boy, yelled fearfully. He had murdered his mother by stabbing her thirteen times. After the two spears had been thrust through him a third man came forward with a spear and thrust it through the criminal just where he had stabbed his mother. Thirteen times the spear went through his body and the terrible performance ended.

Another Disaster in Luzerne County.

SCRANTON, Dec. 17.—The engine house of the Jersey coal mine, operated by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, took fire about half past four o'clock on Thursday afternoon. The house was located in the mine, at the end of a tunnel about two hundred and fifty feet long and at the head of a slope leading down into chambers. Three men were shut in the mine, and it was supposed that they had perished, but they succeeded in getting out safely about two o'clock on Friday morning. A man named John J. Warren, who went into an air shaft to search for the men, was overcome with the foul air and perished. His remains were recovered at four o'clock this morning, after the fire was nearly quenched. He leaves a wife and three children. The engines were mostly destroyed and the damage done will cause a detention of from four to six weeks. The mine was producing two hundred tons of coal per day.

Bravery of a Young Lady.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 17.—Mr. Wilkinson, an old gentleman who watched a crossing on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad, below Mill creek, was carrying a large plank across the track yesterday afternoon, and the switch engine coming at full speed, he dropped the plank, and in haste to get off the track slipped and fell, and would certainly have lost his life had it not been for the heroic conduct of Miss Brown, a young lady, who seeing the perilous position in which Mr. Wilkinson was placed, ran to his aid and, at the risk of her own life, succeeded in dragging him off the track in time to save him from the terrible fate which seemed almost inevitable.

DON'T DRINK.—Boys, don't drink. It may be fashionable. It may seem smart. You may think that, like a mustache, it looks manly. You may say that Mr. A. and Mr. B., who hold prominent positions in the world, have guzzled for forty years. This may be true. Many moderate drinkers arise to distinction, but they reach eminence not on account of this failing, but in spite of it. They would be more esteemed without it. Just look around this city, and see if you can find one man or woman who has been made better or happier by drink. You will not find one. On the other hand, you will see wrecks all along the shore. You will see men whose lives are failures solely by drink. It may have commenced in the social circle; where wit and beauty added their charm to the sparkle of the wine. It may have commenced at the 'respectable' saloon to which men are sometimes driven by the mistakes at home. But it too often ends in the lowest and last place to which fallen men go.

PACKARD'S Monthly loses none of its life and sprightliness as it grows older. With each number its friends and circulation increase. It owes its great success to the talent employed in writing for it, and to the low rates of subscription, which have been $1 a year, but will be in the future $2, and very cheap at that. No nonsense nor continued tales are ever found within its covers, but with leaves always opened, it brings to the young men of America rich treats of intellectual food. The third year of this magazine will commence in January, when every young man should subscribe. S. S. Packard, publisher, 937 Broadway, New York.

OUR CEMETERY.—The other day we strolled among the graves of our beautiful Cemetery. One feels a sadness not unmingled with pleasure while walking among the graves of the departed. It is sad indeed to see there the graves of the sweet blooming infant, of the promising young man, of the strong man of influence, cut down as it were in the midst of his usefulness—sad indeed to think of the ties that have been sundered, the fond hopes that have been buried, the hearts that have been broken; still, as you visit grave after grave, and look at the evergreen emblems hope has placed there, and the flowers that fond affection has planted, read the tributes to worth inscribed on the marble, and feel that it is not unmanly to weep over such a grave, you seem to hear a voice that says to the soul—"One less to love on earth—one more to meet in Heaven." It is in the "city of the dead" that you can realize that

"Hope looks beyond the bounds of Time."

There you are brought into the heavenly companionship of the good who have been taken from earth.—You are almost made to long that you are not with them. You are taught love for the living. Who is it that can read on the tombstones those tributes of affection, and on going away cherish hatred against a fellow mortal. The Brotherhood of Sorrow in which we mingle at the graves of cherished friends teach us to love and a desire to be loved.

How the finer feelings of our nature swell as we read on the marble that it marks the grave of "Our Little Alice," "Our Dear Mother," "Dear Little Willie," "Dear Kate," and the simple word "Father" or "Mother."

These inscriptions are all sacred to some visitors to these spots. They hallow the hearts of those who read their tender language; for it is the language of the heart.

And, there is sweetness in the thought that the friendships we form here are not broken by death. The cold grave may cover over those whom we have loved on earth, but it cannot take them from the places they fill in our hearts.

An inscription carried us forward to the end of these beautiful lines:

"As falls the leaf and fades the flower,
Thus one by one we pass away;
Like them we live our destined hour,
Like them we wither and decay."

As the lesson of the Cemetery carries us forward to the fall of the leaf and the fading flower, so does it point us through the Winter to once more glorious Summer. Those leaves may fall and flowers fade, yet will Summer time come again!

And so, after this life, in perpetual Summer shall flowers perennial bloom. The dead in the Cemetery are gone from us; but—in the words of one of their inscriptions—they are

"Gone to the land of rest
Gone where the angels are,
Gone where all is blest."

A Hoax.

A few weeks ago, a Temple of Honor was organized in this place, and as is peculiar to all such secret organizations there is certain paraphernalia, such as regalia, books, etc, that is necessary for the prosecution of business. Of course these articles were expected by the newly made Templars, and when the word came on Wednesday, a number were invited to see them.—They went, and on the road down were gloating over the fact that they would be the first to see the 'elephant.' On their arrival at the warehouse the officers in charge, who were at the head of the "goak," ushered the anxious Templars into a room where was shown to their gaze two living goats, that were to be shipped to the northern end of the county. On seeing the goats, the Templars saw the hoax, and needed no further explanation, but hastened from the room to tell other brethren what nice things they had received for their Temple.

A Woman's Presence of Mind.

On Saturday morning last Miss Germain who resides on Judge Taylor's farm, and drives a milk wagon to town, met with a narrow escape: The horse and wagon were proceeding along the tracks in front of the warehouse, the wheels going over the ties, and the horse on the track, when an engine rapidly approached. The lady happened to see it coming and without attempting to cross as many might have done, she had presence of mind to suddenly turn the horse and left one of the front wheels on the track, which was struck by the engine and badly damaged. Miss Germain thereby saved her own life and the life of the horse, though the milk was spilled and the wagon broken.

Tallman's Self-Balancing Inkstand.

Attention is respectfully solicited to the following description of the above article which is at this time the theme of conversation among those who have had an opportunity of seeing it and judging of its merits.

It is the only inkstand in the world that can be upset, rolled over, jarred, tilted, or meet with a violent concussion, without spilling a particle of ink or injuring the stand! It is entirely new, and is a most ingenious combination of all the qualities desirable in an Inkstand, among which are convenience, adaptability, economy, neatness, ornament, simplicity and durability. It is a combined inkstand, pen-rack, calendar and pen-wiper, and is perfectly adapted to all these different uses, occupying no more space than the common inkstand. As an Inkstand, it is vastly superior to any other in the world. As a pen-rack, it is elegant. As a calendar it is perpetual and unerring. As a pen-wiper, it is neat and convenient. It saves vastly more than its cost in carpets, clothing, papers, books, tables, etc., all of which often suffer greatly from ink-stains caused by accident to the common inkstands. They are used by all classes, private and public.

This beautiful and useful article can be had at Lewis' Book Store. Price, $2,00. tf.

MARRIED,

At the residence of the bride's parents, on thh 16th inst., by Rev. Thos. Barnhart, Mr. GEO. W. SHULTZ and Miss ANNA R. LYTLE, both of Spruce Creek, this county.

On the 27th ult., by Rev. L. D. Steckel, Mr. AARON J. MILLER and Miss MARY E. RECK, both of Shirleysburg.

On the 7th inst., by Rev. A. W. Guyer, Mr. D. R. MOORE and Miss EMMA L. PATTON, daughter of B. F. Patton, Esq., of Altoona.

DIED,

In this borough, on Sunday last, Mrs. JANE ARMITAGE, in the 95th year of her age.

The deceased was the oldest resident of this borough. She was born in Ireland, and came to this country about quite young. She resided in Henderson township, this county, the greater part of her life, and was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church.

At Springfield Furnace, Blair Co., Nov. 30th, ALVAH C. SPECK, aged 21 years.

Again we are called upon to record the death of a beloved schoolmate. Again we behold a proof of the uncertainty of life. Not only the old waste away and die, but the young—those in the springtime of life, are too called upon to leave all that is dear to them on earth. O, Death, thou wert cruel to rob us of one so young, so interesting. Alvah, thou art gone, thy work is done, thy pilgrimage is o'er, and we are left alone. No more will thy merry voice mingle with ours in the school room. No more thy cheerful smile gladden a mother's heart. We miss thee, we mourn for thee, yet bow in humble submission to power divine. M. A. G.

In this borough, on Tuesday morning, Dec. 14th, 1869, Mr. WILLIAM W. HILDEBRAND, aged 28 years, 3 months and 23 days.

The deceased was one of the proprietors of the Morrison House, in this place, where he became well and favorably known. He was a loving son, a kind brother, a true friend, and a consistent member of the Presbyterian church for many years. Those who knew him best will bear testimony to his many social, intellectual and moral attributes. His disease being consumption, he was subject to many prostrations during the last fourteen years, but during all that period he was never heard to murmur or complain; and during his last illness he endured his sufferings with characteristic fortitude, and was perfectly resigned to the will of Providence.

"Few were his days; but yet enough to teach
Love, duty, generous feelings, high desires,
Faith, hope, devotion; and what more could length
Of days have brought him! What but vanity;
Joys frailer even than health or human life;
Temptation; sin and sorrow, both too sure;
Evils that wound, and cares that fret the heart!
Repine not, therefore, ye that love the dead."

At his residence on Herr street, in Harrisburg, Dec. 16th, of consumption, Captain P. H. MCATEER, aged 44 yrs. 9 months, and 2 days.

The deceased was a former resident of this place, and previous to the breaking out of the war was the popular landlord of the Washington Hotel. In 1861 he enlisted as a private in the three months service; at Hagerstown became seriously ill, and was taken to his home in Altoona; he recovered, and was instrumental in raising Co. G, of the 12th Pa. Cavalry, of which he was elected second lieutenant. Subsequently he became Captain of the company and before the close of the war acted as Major of the regiment. Recently he was appointed a route agent on the Penna. Railroad between Harrisburg and Altoona, and proved himself to be a reliable and efficient officer. His complaint was an affection of the heart and lungs. He leaves a wife and four children. His remains were interred in the Catholic Cemetery, of this place, on Friday last.

LORILLARD'S "EUREKA" SMOKING TOBACCO is an excellent article of granulated Virginia, wherever introduced it is universally admired. It is put up in handsome muslin bags, in which orders for Meerchaum Pipes are daily packed.

LORILLARD'S "Yacht Club" SMOKING TOBACCO, classed by all who consume it as the "finest of all." It is made of the choicest leaf grown; it is anti-nervous in its effects, as, the Nicotine has been extracted; it leaves no disagreeable taste after smoking; it is very mild, light in color and in weight, hence one pound will last as long as 3 of ordinary tobacco. In this brand we also pack orders every day for first class Meerchaum Pipes. Try it and convince yourselves it is all it claims to be, "The Finest of All."

LORILLARD'S CENTURY CHEWING TOBACCO. This brand of Fine Cut chewing tobacco has no equal or superior anywhere. It is without doubt the best chewing tobacco in the country.

LORILLARD'S SNUFFS have now been in general use in the United States over 110 years and still acknowledged "the best" wherever used.

If your storekeeper does not have these articles for sale, ask him to get them; they are sold by respectable jobbers almost everywhere.

Steam for Plows.

Mr. Owen Redmond of Rochester, N. Y., has invented and constructed a steam locomotive which weighs, including boiler and water, but two tuns, yet which draws three plows and does excellent work. So say the Rochester journals, on the strength of an experimental trial. Says The Union:

"There are wheels forward, which are made to turn under the control of the steering-wheel, and thus the machine is guided by the pilot upon the deck. All this is simple enough, and every mechanic knows what it is or what may be done in this way. The main or traction-wheels are what constitute the feature of the machine. They are five feet in diameter, and have a tread of eight inches in width. The rims of these wheels are perforated in twelve places, equi-distant, the apertures being somewhat of triangular shape. Through these apertures twelve blades or spears, resembling somewhat the flukes of an anchor, are projected by machinery within the rim of the wheel. As the surface of the wheel in revolving comes to the earth, these blades protrude through the aperture and are forced into the ground to prevent the wheel from slipping, and, as soon as they cease to be of service in the progress of the wheel, they retreat within the rim, and from the uppermost side of the rim are not seen at all. These blades are seven inches long and five in width, and may be projected to a greater or less extent at the will of the operator. They are operated by two cams and two levers, quite simple, and there is no back strain as the rim of the wheel leaves the ground. There are powerful springs which come into use to relieve the blades when they are projected against stones or other obstructions. There was no slip to the wheels at the trial yesterday, and the utility of the invention was fully established on this point."

We trust this is all true, and that the new locomotive will do lots of plowing and other useful work. It seems to begin well.

Housekeepers' Recipes.

We take the following from Mrs. Hunnibee's diary in the Hearth and Home:

For a Cold.—Take a teaspoonful of crab apple jelly every hour or two.—The relief it affords is almost immediate, and has proved permanent.

Rye Breakfast Cakes.—Two cups of rye meal, one cup of flour, two well-beaten cakes, whites and yolks separately, one pint of sweet milk, and a little salt. Bake in earthen cups about thirty minutes in a hot oven. If they are not thoroughly done when removed from the cups, they will fall.

Sausage Meat.—Three pounds of fresh pork, one of lean beef, four teaspoonfuls of black pepper, six of salt, six of powdered sage and summer savory. When it was thoroughly mixed, I pressed it into small bags made of old domestic. It will when used be cut off in slices, floured and fried. The hearts of hogs make excellent sausages, and are used in the following manner: Twenty pounds of hogs' hearts, ten pounds of fat pork, twelve ounces of salt, six ounces of pepper, sage to taste, other spices if you like them, chop fine and put in skins.

Scrapple.—Take all the odd bits of lean; the faces of the porkers, a small portion of liver, and boil all together till the bones drop out. Pick out the bones and everything non-edible, chop the meat fine, draining all the liquor back into the kettle, and removing all the fat. Thicken the liquor with Indian-meal till it is of the consistency of batter, and boil quite a while; then put in the chopped meat, sage, salt and pepper; boil altogether and take out into pans. When cold, cut in slices and fry for breakfast.

☞At a Presbyterian installation in Kansas the other day, the minister, who was from Missouri, and who gave the right hand of fellowship to him who was installed, took occasion to say that he was "from the home of the bushwacker," and that his friend "lived in the State of Jayhawkers. We bushwacked you and you Jayhawked us." Therefore, "I give you the right hand of Christian fellowship. Redeemed Missouri greets victorious Kansas."
